Google-like search combines WRLC catalog, George, and select databases. Good for finding articles, book reviews, or peer-reviewed literature. Need to use limiters to help sift through results. Decent tool for those starting projects.

Our catalog, GEORGE. Use it to find books, newspapers and journals, encyclopedias, government documents, Special Collections holdings, movies—most bibliographic material with the exception of journal articles.

This searches only articles in OneSearch. You can still find Google Scholar on this tab, but you must select it. Google Scholar is most helpful for checking to see if the library has an article in full-text—type in the beginning of a citation to find out. If you’re on campus GS is synched with our library’s database holdings.

Search Bar Legend

Don’t know where to look? Search the library website for anything library-related, like policies, room locations, or library staff.